Dear Sir,

I just received a letter from Professor Mariano Picón-Salas, Superintendente de Educación Nacional, Caracas (Venezuela) South America). Professor Picón-Salas, formerly of the Universidad de Chile in Santiago, writes me: "I am very interested in your proposition to help to those non-arian professors which had been violently withdrawn from their chairs in Germany. If we could have a list of these professors, someone of them might be elected for the different teaching posts which will be created in Venezuela".

I wonder indeed whether these will be posts for university teachers. But I think it might be useful for you to enter into direct communication with professor Picón-Salas who is a very good man.

Indeed one has to be very careful when going to South America where there is still a great lack of stability in the university life.

Yours very sincerely

A. Lipschütz.
